THE BIDS FOR BONDS

A Busy Scene Expected at Their Opening Next Wednesday

ANTICIPATIONS OF TREASURY OFFICIALS

A New Experiment That Will Be Watched With Interest.

NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION

A busy scene will be witnessed in the private office of Secretary Carlisle next Wednesday morning, when the bids are opened for the new 4 per cent loan. Bidders, newspaper correspondents and promoters will be allowed to witness the opening, so far as the accommodation of the big room at the south end of the Treasury Department will permit. The work of opening and classifying the bids is likely to take several hours, under the most perfect arrangements. There were nearly three hundred bids submitted for the second loan of 1894, when much less attention was attracted to the subject, and it was generally believed that the bonds would be obtained by a powerful syndicate. The bids thus far received for the new loan have not been counted, but they are known to number several thousand, and the number reaching the treasury will probably be larger during the time it takes before Wednesday noon than it has yet been. Secretary Carlisle has been endeavoring to perfect the arrangements for announcing the bids, with the amount and the price of each, but he has hesitated to order the opening and tabulation of the offers before Wednesday for fear that the average prices offered would be so low that the government would be forced to accept them. Mr. Huntington, the experienced head of the loans division, issued a circular some time ago showing the prices which should be offered to secure the bonds at certain annual rates of return. A subscriber willing to receive only 2 1/2 per cent on his investment would be asked to bid $110-32 1/2; one desiring 3 per cent would bid $109-08 1/2; and one unwilling to loan his money for less than 3 1/2 per cent would bid $108-40 1/2. A subscriber expecting to earn 4 per cent will, of course, bid only 100, while one desiring to earn more will bid below par. It is expected that the bids for the new loan will be submitted or that they will be accepted if received. The general impression among financiers appears to be that the government will be able to obtain the bonds at an average price of perhaps 100.

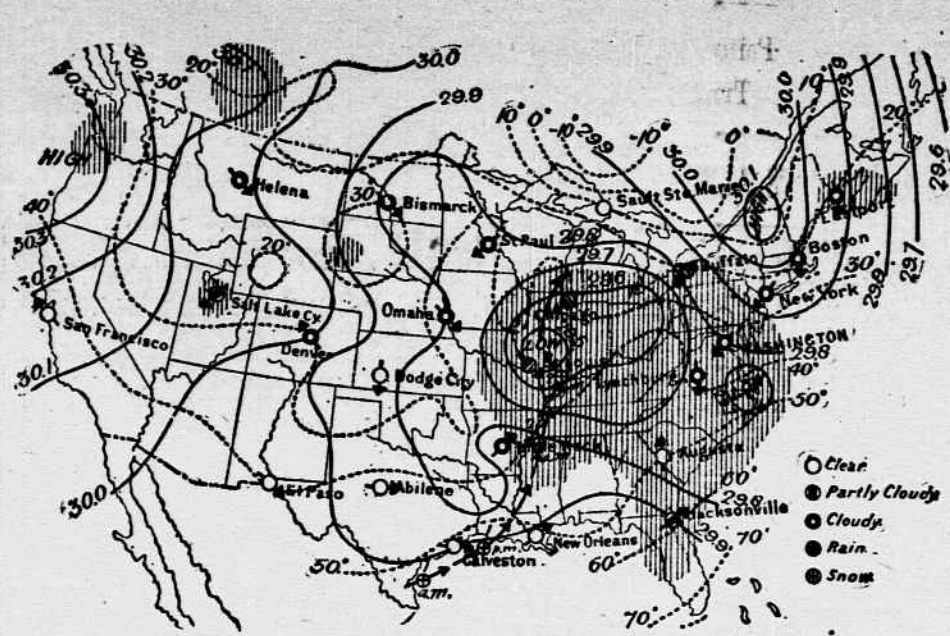

Printing the New Bonds.
The present loans of the United States are very far from being of a popular character in the sense of being held in small blocks. The new bonds are being printed as usual, in the denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000, for the additional ones of $5,000 and $10,000 for the registered bonds. Only a few hundred bonds, either coupon or registered, are outstanding because the denominations of $50 and $100 are the great majority are in denominations of $1,000 and larger. The national banks usually deposit the largest denominations, and the smaller ones are held by individuals. The greater convenience in counting and handling. The bureau of engraving and printing has been at work on the new bonds and a much larger edition than usual has been ordered of the denominations of $50 and $100, in anticipation of the new loan. The estimated cost of the $50,000,000 of new bonds is $133,000,000 in coupon bonds and $133,000,000 in registered bonds. The law permits the government to issue coupon bonds at a rate of interest of 4 per cent, but does not permit the exchange back again from registered to coupon.

Anticipations of Treasury Officials.
The treasury officials are counting upon the success of the new loan to supply them with a large working balance, but to contract the currency to a point which will prevent the persistent export of gold. The general cash balance, which stood on January 31 at $180,021,329, will be increased by $100,000,000 by the proceeds of the new loan. The estimated cost of the $50,000,000 of new bonds is $133,000,000 in coupon bonds and $133,000,000 in registered bonds. The law permits the government to issue coupon bonds at a rate of interest of 4 per cent, but does not permit the exchange back again from registered to coupon.

Trying an Experiment.
The contraction of the circulating medium in order to arrest gold exports is the customary device of the great European banks in times of stringency, and one of the means of accomplishing it is the increase in the rate of discount. The treasury has no direct power to raise the discount rate, because it is not a lender of money, but it is hoped that the withdrawal of gold from circulation and paper from the circulation will compel the New York banks to raise their discount rates, and Mr. J. P. Morgan was understood to have contemplated the experiment. The experiment was recently tried in the bond market, and the result was a temporary increase in the rate of discount, but it was not permanent.

The National Bank Currency.
The national banks are already preparing to guard against any tendency to the contraction which may follow the placement of the bonds. The circulation during January decreased $220,230, and stands at $213,407,585, but this is not an indication of the correspondence which has been reaching Controller Eckels regarding new circulation. All the orders for new currency which have been suggested or inquired about by the controller's office would foot up nearly $200,000,000. This is the highest point reached since the spring of 1893. The actual orders for printing new notes, however, have been sent to the bureau of engraving and printing, and only about $10,000,000. Controller Eckels is at a rule some months ago that banks ordering new circulation should pay for it, whether they finally decided to take it or not.

THE OFFICIAL WEATHER MAP.

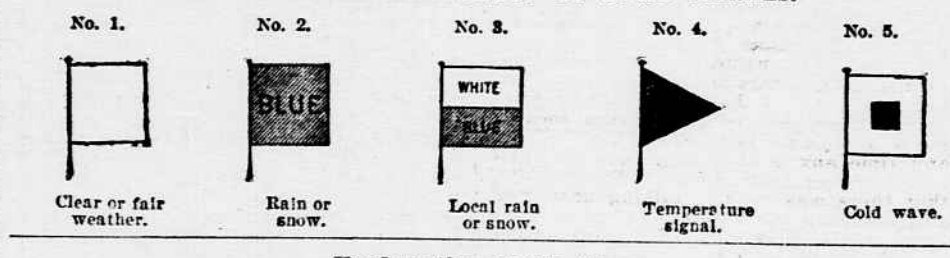

EXPLANATORY NOTE: Observations taken at 8 a.m., 75th meridian time. Solid lines are isobars or lines of equal air pressure, drawn for each tenth of an inch. Dotted lines are isotherms or lines of equal temperature, drawn for each tenth of a degree. Shaded areas are regions where rain or snow has fallen during preceding twenty-four hours. The "High" and "Low" show location of areas of high and low barometer. Small arrows show the wind.

UMBRELLA WEATHER.
It Will Rain Today and Tonight—Clearing Tomorrow.
Forecast till 5 p.m. Tuesday: For the District of Columbia, Delaware and Maryland, rain and warmer tonight; Tuesday, clearing; northeasterly winds; high on the coast today and tonight, shifting to westerly on Tuesday.
For Virginia, rain and warmer tonight; clearing and colder Tuesday; northeasterly winds, high on the coast today and tonight, becoming westerly Tuesday.
Weather conditions and general forecast. The storm central in the lower Mississippi valley on Sunday morning, and moving northward into the Ohio valley, attended by rain and snow in the Ohio and middle Mississippi valleys and the middle Atlantic states. It will extend eastward to the middle states and New England tonight and Tuesday, and rain or snow may be expected to reach the coast. A secondary storm appears to be developing off the North Carolina coast, and it may cause northeast gales from Nantucket to Hatteras this afternoon.

The pressure is relatively high in New England and on the Pacific coast. The barometer has risen in New England and the western Mississippi valley, and in the extreme northwest; it has fallen in the lake regions and the Ohio valley and on the middle Atlantic coast. It is warmer in New England, the Atlantic and east gulf states. The weather will probably clear in the Ohio valley and the Atlantic states by Tuesday, and fair weather is indicated for the gulf states.
The weather is warmer in New England, with slight changes in temperature in the Atlantic and gulf states.

THE WEATHER FORECASTS BY FLAG SIGNALS.

Explanation of the Flags.
The flags are hoisted each day upon the issue of the morning weather map and not until dark. They indicate the weather that may be expected during the following thirty hours, but are particularly the last twenty-four hours of that period. They are to be read from the top of the flag downward. If more than one kind of weather is predicted for the period from 8 p.m. to 8 p.m. the conditions first named in the forecast will be represented by the uppermost flag. When a warning of rain or snow is included in the forecast message, the cold-wave flag will be displayed below the proper weather flag.
The temperature flag, when placed above numbers 1, 2 or 3, indicates warmer weather; when placed below numbers 1, 2 or 3, indicates colder weather; when not displayed, the indications are that the temperature will remain stationary.
